Land and natural resources belong to all! Addressing gender inequality in access, control and ownership of land is instrumental to dealing with the development challenges of today, ending ravaging climate crises, growing global food shortages, persistent wars and conflicts. We welcome participants bringing to the forefront what works to secure gender equity in land rights towards a just and sustainable world.

Session objectives

- Welcome and framing the issues - What gender transformative approaches are and how the concept embraces different approaches.
- Have a dual focus to unpack what gender transformative approaches mean for strengthening of women's land rights and overall improvements in gender equity and participation within land governance and management.
- Discuss effective approaches and tools used to transform gender relationships.

Key learning Outcomes

1. What are gender transformative approaches
2. Lessons/experiences to encourage social norm change and strengthen gender equity in land rights
3. The role of women and men in addressing women's land rights
